TO MR. W. T. BETTS, one whom we realize we owe too great a debt to be calculated and estimated in the time-worn phrases and platitudes; whom we sincerely admire and respect; whom we consider the true encouragement, inspiration, and force of this publication; under whom we do not hesitate to leave the future staffs of the Marlinian without a thought of a possible failure of the paper; and, most of all, who is the inspirator, mentor and perpetrator of the idea of the Marlinian, we do now and here give this - DEDICATION.
